DEA BACKS DRUG KINGPINS

By Keith Johnson

On the heels of an official U.S. operation where federal agents allowed U.S. guns to fall into the hands of known criminals, the question that is now being asked is: Did drug enforcement agents look the other way as their informants smuggled tons of illegal narcotics into the United States?

According to a recent discovery motion filed on behalf of Vicente Zambada-Niebla, a top lieutenant for Mexico's notorious Sinaloa drug cartel who now stands trial in Chicago on a variety of narcotics trafficking charges: "The United States has a policy of entering into agreements with individuals who they know are violent narcotics traffickers, so long as those persons are willing to provide information against other drug traffickers."

Zambada-Niebla's defense attorneys are seeking documents that prove U.S. federal agencies provided benefits, including immunity, to cartel members that were willing to provide information against rival drug gangs.

These court documents highlight the story of Mexican attorney Humberto Loya, a high-ranking Sinaloa cartel member who is also a close confidant of Zambada-Niebla's father, Ismael "Mayo" Zambada-Garcia. Both Loya and Mayo were indicted for their participation in a massive drug trafficking conspiracy in 1995. However, the case was dismissed in 2008 after it was revealed that Loya had served for 10 years as an informant for U.S. law enforcement.

The documents allege that sometime prior to 2004, the U.S. government entered into an agreement with Loya and the Sinaloa cartel. Under that agreement, the Sinaloa cartel, through Loya, was to provide information about rival gangs to the U.S. government. In return, the government agreed to dismiss its case against Loya and not to interfere with his drug trafficking activities and those of the Sinaloa cartel.

Mike Levine is a former DEA agent who has been called "America's top undercover cop" by such mainstream media outlets as 60 Minutes. He recently spoke with this reporter and was asked if the allegations by Zambada-Niebla have any merit.

"Agents who handle informers on big cases—some of them, not all of them—are self-interested," said Levine. "They really don't care about anything but using the informant to generate career points. They get promoted based on intelligence reports they get from informers, and they look the other way on almost anything."

Levine added: "You can't do much more damage to the United States. Cops and agents try to get an ounce off the street while the CIA smuggles in 27 tons of cocaine. It's really sad." ★

PERSONAL FROM THE EDITOR

Get it Right, Not First

At AFP, we pride ourselves on getting it right. But in an Internet age with lightning fast communications, everyone in the newspaper, television and radio markets find it increasingly difficult to compete with those on the so-called information superhighway.

Without doubt, the Internet has become the greatest portal of free speech ever known to mankind. Conversely, some venues in cyberspace are also the greatest and most dangerous sources of disinformation. Unfortunately, included in this mix are websites in the alternative media that habitually leap to conclusions and post material that is factually incorrect. Others then disseminate these articles across the Internet, and soon the truth is replaced by rampantly shoddy journalism.

Obviously, all of us need to watch out, be wary, and use discernment when determining what is news and what is sensationalized hype. That's where AFP enters the picture because we painstakingly sift through every news story to determine whether it's legitimate. Too often, the wild-eyed, frothing-at-the-mouth individuals running some of the larger websites fall for these red herrings, thereby giving all of us a bad name.

A perfect example was the Aug. 5 shoot-down of a U.S. Chinook helicopter over Afghanistan that was loaded with U.S. Special Forces soldiers. Almost immediately, without checking the facts, certain crazed, ego-driven "conspiracy theorists" announced that members of the Navy Seal Team Six who perished were deliberately murdered because they were part of the supposed Osama bin Laden kill team.

Online readers were abuzz with every scintillating detail—except the story wasn't true. Navy Seals did die in this tragedy, but none of them was part of the elite squadron that reportedly executed bin Laden. Despite being wrong, these sites—even weeks later—are still running the same bogus articles without any corrections, updates or admissions that they had jumped the gun.

At AFP, we didn't fall into such a trap. With a network of writers and editors that do the research and delve into every aspect of a story, we realized that yet again these more gullible website owners had been led on a wild goose chase. One AFP staff member remarked, "I wonder how many times a year these big-name conspiracy researchers get it wrong?"

At AFP, we're the ones you can trust because we wade through all the baloney. That is undoubtedly worth the wait.

Power Elite Terrified of Ron Paul

With only 152 votes separating them, top tier Republican presidential candidates Reps. Michele Bachmann (Minn.) and Ron Paul (Texas) were effectively tied in the Aug. 3 Iowa straw poll. Yet, the mainstream media chose only to focus on Mrs. Bachmann, refusing to even mention Paul. In an interview with a national news outlet, Paul explained why the mainstream is terrified of him: "They don't want to discuss my views because, I think, they are frightened by us challenging the status quo and the establishment when it comes to foreign policy, monetary policy, the entitlement system, because my views are quite different than the other candidates." They are also probably scared Paul will audit, then abolish, the Fed.

CANADA-TEXAS PIPELINE

Supporters of the Canada-to-Texas oil pipeline are urging Barack Obama to authorize the massive undertaking of a 1,700-mile project, which, they say, will create 20,000 U.S. jobs. The Keystone XL pipeline would cost $7 billion and deliver 1.1 billion barrels a day from the oil sands of Alberta, Canada, to U.S. Gulf Coast refineries. Environmentalists see a problem. They say the oil comes from tar sand, is of low quality and produces three to five times more pollution than lighter crudes. Why not pump more high-quality Alaskan crude?

BLAME CANADA

Barack Obama has decided to take a bus tour around the United States, allegedly to help promote a White House initiative to put Americans back to work (some say he is really campaigning for re-election and using taxpayer money to do so). He hadn't even gotten out of the White House parking lot before media outlets were blasting the costly junket. To start with, the two armor-plated buses that Obama will be traveling in, while purchased in Tennessee, were not made in the U.S. The VIP coaches were manufactured in Canada by Canadian—not U.S.—workers and purchased at a cost to U.S. taxpayers of $2.2 million—each.

LEADING U.S. TO SOCIALISM

Rep. Dan Burton (R-Ind.) says that we must stop viewing the president's policies as the innocent missteps of a man who is "in over his head" and realize instead that his disastrous policies are intentional steps on the road to socialism. Socialism is in reality bureaucratic ownership and administration of the means of production and distribution of goods," the most inefficient form of government known to man. Obama has been doing a lot of "distribution of goods." As Margaret Thatcher said: "The problem with socialism is that you eventually run out of other people's money" to spend.

Attacks on Whites by Black Gangs: An Increasing Trend

Hate crimes are being organized instantly by so-called "flash mobs" in which packs of dozens or even hundreds of black youths appear out of nowhere to commit assaults, robberies and other crimes against innocent bystanders and store owners in cities all across America, even state fairs, including the Iowa state fair. In Peoria, Ill. a mob of black people began screaming, "Kill Whitey," and disrupted traffic by pulling people out of cars and by blocking the highway. Many police and firemen were burned and injured. The mob beat up as many white people as they could find. But many local newspapers refused to acknowledge the racial aspect of the crimes. The Justice Department's definition of a hate crime is "violence of intolerance and bigotry, intended to hurt and intimidate someone because of their race, ethnicity, national origin, religious, sexual orientation or disability." See page 3 in this week's issue for more on this matter.

PATRIOTISM ON THE RISE

According to the Southern Poverty Law Center, a front for the notorious ADL, right-wing militias are showing "explosive growth." The fact is, for the first time in American history, we have more than 1,000 so-called "hate" groups. The great news is that most are patriot outfits that, according to the SPLC, are "conspiracy minded organizations, which see the federal government as their primary enemy."

MORE HATE CRIMES

Police in Milwaukee investigating the black-on-white attacks that recently occurred at the county fair there say they have arrested 31 people and will be filing hate crime charges against at least one. The Chicago Tribune reports that the black youth told investigators that he and other blacks beat up whites because they were "easy targets." He also said he "was going along with the crowd" when he helped rob vendors.

YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT

The latest figures for unemployment released by the Labor Department reveal that joblessness among 16- to 19-year-olds across the country is over 20 percent, which is far worse than the 9 percent rate for all Americans. In Washington, D.C., however, unemployment among black youths is especially bad. It is more than double the national average, or 49 percent.

FOOD FACTORIES

A new study by the University of Florida found that in the past 10 years the overwhelming number of food-borne illnesses has been caused by "complex factory foods," which includes all non-meat food that has been manufactured in factories using multiple chemicals and additives. Out of 3.8 million reported illnesses, 2.7 million were due to contaminated foods that were made in factories.

Black-on-White Attacks Increase Across U.S.

Philadelphia, Milwaukee on the front lines of black hate crimes against whites.

By Dave Gahary

A disturbing trend emerging across the nation is the emergence of black “flash mobs” that attack whites, even using Internet technology to help them organize their assaults.

Liberal commentators either ignore the phenomenon or use excuses of economic woes to justify the overtly racist behavior. These incidents are being given tepid coverage on an overall basis by the mainstream media that won't allow honest discussion of this savagery. Of course, these same media outlets that give scant attention to black-on-white violence regularly give nonstop coverage to rare instances of white-on-black attacks.

Law enforcement outposts across the country, who in the past have been ordered to downplay black-on-white attacks while fully prosecuting any white-on-black attack, are now reluctantly being forced to use “hate crime” statutes against blacks in their communities.

As reported by AFP, hundreds of black youths violently attacked Caucasian strangers as they were exiting the Wisconsin State Fair in early August, pulling them out of their cars and off motorcycles, then punching and kicking them. One of the arrested black teens corroborated several eyewitness accounts by saying that he personally selected whites because they were “easy targets.”

Local police now admit the attacks were racially motivated and should be prosecuted as hate crimes, although, according to The Christian Science Monitor, “Two similar attacks earlier this year in Milwaukee did not result in hate crime charges against the suspects.”

Condemnation has come from many corners, including Gov. Scott Walker (R-Wis.), who dispatched state troopers to the fair and required teens to have adult chaperones after dark. Even Milwaukee's City Council president, who is black, said, “Hate crime enforcement must take place.”

Similar incidents unfolded in Philadelphia, Pa., although the methods used by blacks to organize their attacks against whites differed.

In Milwaukee, the attacks took place impromptu, by word of mouth, after blacks, who were initially beating on each other, switched their energies toward white fairgoers. However, attacks in the City of Brotherly Love employed a more sophisticated tactic to organize the violence: Internet social networking websites like Facebook and Twitter, accessed through cellular telephones.

A new term has been coined to describe the bringing together of many people for illegal or provocative purposes: “flash mob.” A similar term, “flash rob,” was coined to describe a phenomenon where groups of youths organize to loot retail establishments, such as convenience stores, many times in broad daylight while defenseless clerks look on helplessly. In nearly every instance of this modern-day hooliganism, black teens were the perpetrators. In mid-August, a flash mob looted a 7-11 store in Germantown, Md. Although captured by surveillance cameras (also on YouTube), police are not actively pursuing the criminals.

Black-on-white flash mob attacks in Philadelphia have been frequent and violent enough that the city's black mayor, Michael Nutter, instituted street patrols and a weekend curfew for teens aged 13 to 18 in the areas most affected. Although similar incidents have occurred over the past two years, Nutter delivered some particularly harsh words to these marauders, saying they were “damaging their own race.”

Nutter also took aim at absentee fathers.

“A particular problem in the black community is we have too many men making too many babies that they don't want to take care of,” he said. Encouraging fathers to get involved with their kids, he threatened criminal charges for those who act more like “sperm donors” rather than parents. ★

Chiropractor reveals Do-it-Yourself Secrets

Doctor's new Home Chiropractic book Stops Pain, Saves Money

Respected Doctor of Chiropractic is the author of the world's first do-it-yourself home chiropractic handbook... and it has received rave reviews from the many people who have benefitted from it.

According to the author, Dr. Karl V. Holmquist: “Most chiropractors are running a racket of endless treatments. They just want to keep you coming back for more and more expensive office visits. That's why I wrote The Doctor's Book of Home Chiropractic, so families can enjoy the health benefits of chiropractic without all the unnecessary expense... because frankly, it is not difficult at all to do a chiropractic adjustment.”

Here's a small sample of the letters Dr. Holmquist has received from grateful readers:

“While visiting my brother-in-law recently, he was able to relieve the pain in my upper back and neck by using the skills he learned from your home chiropractic book.”
Wanda Holt, Tennessee

“I referred your book to our firm's chiropractor who said, ‘This is one of the most timely, practical and worthwhile pieces of work available to the layman today.’”
Jay Samuelson, North Dakota

“Your book has set us free. Our baby is due any day now and if my husband was unable to maintain my back, I'd be insane by now.” Bess Blackburn, Oregon

“Your home chiropractic book has been such a blessing to our family. My husband and two sons can have an adjustment anytime during the day or night.”

Sue Bresson, R. N., Florida

“Your book has given us relief from pain and also financial burden.”

Ken Averly, Florida

In the The Doctor's Book of Home Chiropractic, Dr. Holmquist teaches you safe and effective chiropractic techniques that can be done by anyone... man or woman, young or old. He demonstrates proven procedures that you can use to help your family and that your family can use to help you. You even learn how to use chiropractic methods on yourself, by yourself, to help free you from pain.

The training you receive is priceless... and, of course, once you learn it, you can use it whenever you want to...wherever you want to...for Free.

Dr. Holmquist, who is the fourth chiropractor in his family, is a graduate of the prestigious Palmer College of Chiropractic, which is the premier chiropractic institution in the world. Dr. Holmquist guides you step-by-step throughout the entire book by means of detailed instructions that are written in clear, plain language. The book is fully illustrated, complete with photos and diagrams. The doctor instructs you precisely how to determine which specific type of chiropractic adjustment is needed... and then he shows you exactly how to do it.

If you or someone you know have ever suffered from back pain, neck pain, pinched nerves, headaches, shoulder pain, hip pain, sciatica, muscle aches or the like... right now you can order a special press run of The Doctor's Book of Home Chiropractic. The price is very reasonable. Although just one visit to the chiropractor can cost $50 or more... as part of this special offer Dr. Holmquist's book is only $19.95 plus $3.98 shipping and handling ($23.93 total.) It comes with a 90 day money back guarantee.

Order an extra copy for family or friend and SAVE. You can order 2 for only $40 total. You save $3.98 shipping on each book, a total savings of $7.96.

HERE'S HOW TO ORDER: Simply PRINT your name and address and the words “Chiropractic Book” on a piece of paper and mail it along with a check or money order to: IMPROVEMENT PUBLISHING, LLC, Dept. CB303, P.O. Box 197, Middlebranch, OH 44652. VISA or MasterCard send card number and expiration date.

Google and CFR Team Up To Halt Criticism of NWO

By Michael Collins Piper

Google, the Internet giant, is now engaging in quasi-governmental police-state-style activity, harnessing its considerable influence and wealth to challenge what it refers to as “extremism.”

Although it’s popular in this day and age to oppose “extremism,” the truth is that the media and powerful international plutocratic interests append this label to any group or individual that challenges the global power elite and its drive for a New World Order.

Now Google—which maintains near total control over the Internet—is using its resources to set up a framework to combat those who dare say “no” to the New World Order.

Through the aegis of its front group, Google Ideas—a so-called “think tank”—Google recently set up an international conference in Dublin, Ireland, dubbed the Summit Against Violent Extremism (SAVE), where it gathered together an odd mix of more than 200 attendees, including “80 former Muslim extremists, neo-nazis, U.S. gang members and other former radicals,” to hammer out ways to use technology to enforce what Google calls global “deradicalization.”

To understand the nature of Google’s scheme is relatively simple when one considers the fact that the individual in charge of the venture is Jared Cohen.

A youthful former State Department policy planning staff official in both the Bush and Obama administrations, Cohen also happens to be an adjunct fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), the New York offshoot of the London-based Royal Institute of International Affairs that functions as the foreign-policy arm of the global Rothschild banking dynasty. In fact, on June 25 The Washington Post reported that the CFR was responsible for helping organize the Dublin conference.

Likewise, it is no coincidence that Cohen was a Rhodes scholar at Oxford University in England, having been indoctrinated by the scholarships—funded by the trust of longtime Rothschild front man Cecil Rhodes—which advocate the concept that the United States should be reunited with Great Britain which (since the early 19th century) had fallen under the control of the Rothschild interests and whose vaunted empire (enriched by the looting of the world’s resources) was the source of much of the Rothschild family’s wealth.

At the State Department, Cohen used his connections to assist Iranian dissidents (also supported by Israeli intelligence) fighting to dislodge Iranian leader Mahmoud Ahmadinejad.

In recent years, major players on the global stage charged with anti-Semitism and “radicalism,” such as Ahmadinejad, have challenged—and are targets of—the New World Order.

In Superclass: The Global Power Elite and the World They Are Making—a volume acknowledging the influence of such New World Order institutions as the CFR—author David Rothkopf writes approvingly of this new global “superclass.” He says the 21st century’s “political fault line” will be a battle of globalists vs. nationalists and that there is an emerging “global network of anti-globalists” opposing the aims of this superclass.

Rothkopf specifically named three figures among this small group of leaders challenging the New World Order: Ahmadinejad, Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez and Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin. To that list we add such others as Malaysia’s valiant Dr. Mahathir Mohamad, no-nonsense Alexander Lukashenko of Belarus and Syria’s courtly Bashar Assad.

JARED COHEN

Architect of Google’s SAVE scheme.

Rothkopf’s opinions are no idle chatter. He speaks from very real insider status, being a member of the superclass himself. He served as managing director of Kissinger Associates, the international consulting firm of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, one of the foremost modern-era architects of the New World Order.

Today we find Google joining the effort to combat nationalists, populists and others who are deemed “radicals.” Those concerned with Google’s already-notorious censorship of the Internet should be more concerned than ever. Google’s SAVE scheme appears to be the opening salvo in a major, well-funded, carefully crafted campaign to save the New World Order from its foes. ★

Europe’s Politicians Support ‘Financial Mafia’

By the National Journal

The Germans meekly gave up their only stronghold, the deutsche mark, and moved without any resistance into the equivalent of a dilapidated euro shack, which is now ablaze. Should they get out of the burning shack alive, they will end up as serfs.

During a meeting between German Prime Minister Angela Merkel and French President Nicholas Sarkozy, the leaders of the financial wars, the three rating agencies, were present at the secret meeting and dictated the terms.

“When Angela Merkel and Nicolas Sarkozy announced the terms for the new bail-out package for Greece and a voluntary participation of the banks, there was a party who participated in the negotiations which should not have been there, the rating agency Fitch,” reported Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung. The agency negotiated with the politicians, regarding the terms they would accept for abstaining from giving a negative rating to Greece. Once again Fitch proved its clout.”

Fitch and Sarkozy made it very clear to Mrs. Merkel that if she did not make hundreds of billions available again for Greece, they would downgrade ratings on countries like Italy, Spain and Belgium, and from one minute to the next Germany will have to pay a few billion euros. A while ago, Der Spiegel reported on 14 trillion euros in debt, which will mature soon. However, derivatives are set so that the debt is never ending.

The vassal politicians of the German Federal Republic wield power that was bestowed upon them in good faith by the nation during elections, which they abused and transferred to the bankers and their rating agencies. The criminals of finance are now “at the center of world politics,” according to one report. We are dealing with an “oligopoly” consisting of only three firms, of questionable origin, to whom Germany in particular and consequently the whole of Europe was put at their mercy. The gentlemen in this oligopoly were never elected, but have been given the right by the traitorous politicians to dictate the laws in Germany and force the Germans into dictatorship.

As soon as a country falls below a certain rating limit set by Fitch, Standard and Poor’s and Moody’s, the financial derivatives spread shoots up. For example, Mrs. Merkel assured us that Greece was “saved” in May 2010 with 110 billion euros. Included in this sum were 85 billion euros for credit default swaps. But only a year later, Greece was once again in the red—330 billion euros. Two weeks later, it was 350 billion euros.

Anyone in Germany who does not join with the nationalists to attack the system is a traitor. Those who still vote for politicians in the service of the financial mafia and who wish to bring our future generations into serfdom, are clearly on the side of the capitalist criminals. ★

Background: The 80 year old inventor, a Choate School and Lafayette College Engineering graduate, invented a scientific measuring device as a 17 year old (still used worldwide). An Oil Well Engineer, Design Engineer at Douglas Aerospace and Honeywell Engineer, at age 30 he started his own business and invented a switch that operates (on-off) within .0001 of an inch. Honeywell and Military/Industrial users: "He's the only person that knows how to produce it!" In similar fashion, textbook science said "You can't change water properties"...he HAS for the benefit of mankind!

LIKE THE ONCOLOGISTS BELOW, REGULATORS REMEMBER WHAT THEY LEARNED IN MEDICAL SCHOOL FROM TWO TIME NOBEL PRIZE WINNER OTTO WARBURG M.D.: "CANCER CELLS CAN'T SURVIVE IN HIGH BLOOD OXYGEN!" THAT'S THE KEY!! WE DISCOVERED HOW TO GET MORE OXYGEN INTO THE BLOOD STREAM BY INCREASING THE SOLUBILITY OF WATER AND THE RESULTS CAN BE MEASURED NON-INVASIVELY ON THE SKIN! THAT'S WHY REGULATORS WON'T ALLOW "ALTERNATIVE CANCER CURES"! NONE PROVIDE THE REQUIRED HIGH BLOOD OXYGEN LEVEL. In addition, cancer can go into remission spontaneously!

This is how this was discovered: An M.D. that taught at the UCLA Medical School used our water to perform non-invasive tests that we can use because the results are measured on the SKIN (using Doppler Ultrasound) to see which water produced the best Blood Flow to the extremities (Blood is 94% water): "Nothing is even close to your water in getting blood to the extremities!!" This is because our water has higher SOLUBILITY (that a child can measure) than ANY other water!! When you increase the Solubility of water, blood flow increases and your Blood can absorb more oxygen coming into your LUNGS (simply oxygenating water doesn't get oxygen into the blood stream)! Regulators also allowed the product "Put It Where It Hurts" because in similar fashion, the results can be measured non-invasively on the SKIN!

I am an 80 year old Engineer and Inventor. When I was in Engineering School text book science said you couldn't increase the Solubility of water (Hydrogen Bond Angle) and some people still believe that. However, The Washington Times with a 600 million investment in Washington, DC has been a major influence and the Advertising Manager called me years ago to say they had at least 50 phone calls ranging from the Los Alamos Nuclear Lab to Johns Hopkins Hospital: "They all have your machines!" Los Alamos Scientists: "We were wrong! He is right!"

If you look at our website, the Ad Manager has a contact number to verify all these reports including his own great success story. With a full page ad in The Washington Times every week for 15 years, he knows more about the results better than anyone including reports from the top three Oncologists in the United States!

I understand the information you are providing is for educational purposes only. As stated above, this information is not intended to diagnose, treat, cure or prevent disease. In all health-related situations, qualified healthcare professionals should always be consulted.

Recently, since it's such a touchy subject, I was startled by the cancer comments from a caller so I said: "How would you know that? He said he was an Oncologist at Sloan for 30 years and since he retired without access to our machine, he wanted our E5 Machine!"

He is just one of the retired Oncologists from Sloan that have bought our machines and mentioned that they all knew about Otto Warburg M.D. in Medical School and they wondered how many years it would take for somebody to figure this out! That made me realize that the Regulators obtained the same information in Medical School and that's why they won't allow "alternative cancer cures"! Since the results can be measured non-invasively on the skin, it has been widely reported in The Washington Post (1/27/92: 10,000 people/day, "Cures Anything") along with a description of our patents that include the method but not the proprietary information required to break down the bonds in water and increase the Solubility.

Investigative reporter Pat Shannan wrote about Otto Warburg M.D. and our machines in the American Free Press. LEARN MORE...it could save your life! ORDER BOTTLED WATER OR BETTER YET BUY OUR HOME MACHINE! 1-800-433-9553 Try our anti-aging skin cream that contains our water for ULTIMATE ABSORPTION AND HYDRATION!! Rick Perry: GOP's Savior?

By Ralph Forbes

With close to 30 percent of the total votes cast in the Iowa straw poll on Aug. 13, Rep. Ron Paul (R-Texas) won a near tie with Rep. Michele Bachmann (R-Minn.). Only 152 votes separated them—but you would never know it if you depended on most establishment news media, which lionized the “top three Republican contenders,” Mitt Romney, Mrs. Bachmann—and newcomer Texas Gov. Rick Perry.

If Obama was the cult leader four years ago, the media's hallelujah choir is now singing the praises of Perry as the “hope and change” guy for 2012. The Texas governor, they claim, is “responsible for more than 40 percent of all of the new jobs created in America.” But there's trouble in paradise.

More than any other single factor, Perry has immigration to thank for those numbers—most of it from Mexico. Perry creates jobs by turning Texas into a Third World country: Texico.

Texas also sucks off the federal teat by taking highway money and Medicaid payments. Texas's budget gap—$27 billion short of what it needs to maintain its inadequate services in the next biennium—is among the worst in the nation.

In other words, Texas has gained at America's loss.

Record oil prices that surged to $145 a barrel in 2008 propped up the Texas economy, while most Americans were extorted for $4 and $5 per gallon gas. About 9.5 percent of Texas hourly workers are paid at or below minimum wage, tying with Mississippi. Low cost of living also helped to make Texas among the nation's fastest-growing states, with the population jumping 20.6 percent to 25 million. About 25 percent of those were illegal immigrants. This steady stream of low-cost labor has combined to fuel above-average job growth. Texas had annual employment growth of 1.15 percent, while the population was growing 1.89 percent every year.

Perry created a number of slush funds. The Texas Enterprise Fund awarded some $412 million in subsidies to companies “to create jobs.” But the Texas comptroller found that $119 million of that money went to companies that didn't deliver the jobs they promised. Taxpayer-funded contracts that sent money overseas to create jobs were “disturbing” and “unacceptable.”

A second major fund under Perry's control, the Texas Emerging Technology Fund, has also proved controversial. It spent some $320 million on tax credits and other subsidies for high-tech companies. The Dallas Morning News found that $16 million was awarded to companies with investors or officers who are large campaign donors.

Wars in Iraq and Afghanistan are also big business in Texas. The aerospace, aviation and war sectors have invested more than $900 million in Texas.

When Perry was the state's agriculture commissioner, the federal government paid “farmer” Perry not to farm his 40 acres in Haskell County. Perry was paid $9,624 under the Conservation Reserve Program to leave his land fallow between 1991 and 1998. Perry's tax returns from when he was in the legislature show he received $72,687 in agricultural program payments between 1987 and 1989.

If Obama was the cult leader four years ago, the media's hallelujah choir is now singing the praises of Perry.

Rick Perry gobbles up a pork barbecue sandwich while campaigning in the Hawkeye state. One of the questions about Perry is whether voters will have an appetite for his free trade policies.

Perry was the front-man for the Bilderbergers to foist the NAFTA Superhighway project—a quarter-mile-wide $184 billion boondoggle of toll roads, rail lines and utilities from the Texas-Mexico border all the way up to the border between Minnesota and Canada—to make it easier to flood America with foreign goods from China.

Perry mandated by executive order that every sixth grade girl, age 11 and up, be vaccinated against a sexually transmitted disease—HPV—with Merck's Gardasil vaccine—at a cost of $360 per shot. Gardasil caused many deaths and painful reactions. Lobbyists were paid hundreds of thousands of dollars, and Merck funded Perry's election campaign for years. Thankfully, Perry was forced to withdraw his order after the Texas Legislature blocked him.

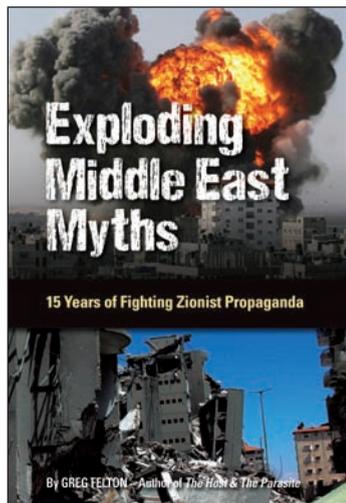

Finally, Perry is also a political ally of the corpulent warmonger John Hagee meaning, if he is elected, his foreign policy will further entangle the United States in the Middle East to defend Israel.

Beware of this Texas governor who pledges “compassionate conservatism” but curses you with ruthless, endless wars based on lies, a wrecked economy, Third World servitude and a heartless security police state. ★

NEW BOOK FROM AFP AND AUTHOR GREG FELTON

Exploding Middle East Myths 15 Years of Fighting Zionist Propaganda

For nearly 63 years, since its creation in 1948, the state of Israel has carefully controlled what the Western world knows about the Zionist state. As a result, what we have received from the mainstream media is reams of powerful propaganda and little truth when it comes to the racist and bellicose nuclear state.

Against this backdrop of censored “news,” one gutsy journalist took a dangerous stand and instead has been telling the truth about Israel for the last 15 years. In this collection of important essays by Canadian writer and researcher Greg Felton, you'll see the truth about Israel, including its brutal treatment of the Palestinians, its blatant disregard for Christians, Muslims and any other non-Jewish religions, and its parasitic relationship with Western governments, especially the United States. Sure to make you smile and seethe at the same time, Felton's trademark wit and wisdom will guide you through the carefully crafted propaganda, correcting the historical record along the way. Donation Scandal Hits Romney Campaign

By Mark Anderson

When the Supreme Court removed the last barriers to corporate funding for political campaigns in the infamous Citizens United vs. Federal Election Commission case in early 2011, the floodgates were opened for corruption in an electoral system already marred by electronic vote scamming and huge ballot access hurdles for candidates in third parties.

Now, a case involving Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney is sparking investigations, because a shell company was formed by one of Romney's cronies just long enough to pump $1 million into his 2012 White House campaign before the company was closed down.

The Hill offered some specifics on Aug. 8, noting that "Romney wouldn't condemn Edward Conrad, a former executive at Bain Capital, the company Romney co-founded, for setting up a company to contribute the bulk sum to the Restore Our Future PAC." Conrad had suddenly confessed that he was the phantom donor who cobbled together W Spann LLC, "a corporation that was founded this year and dissolved shortly after contributing to Restore Our Future, a super-PAC that can receive and spend unlimited amounts of money that was founded by veterans of Romney's 2008 presidential campaign."

The Campaign Legal Center and Democracy 21 have filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission (FEC) and the Justice Department (DOJ) against W Spann. Online news website TPM reports: "the two groups are also asking the FEC and DOJ to formally investigate the activities of the F8 LLC and Eli Publishing L.C. [two more phantom companies] for possible violations of the ban on making contributions in the name of another and for failing to organize and register as a political committee. The groups also want the agencies to look into whether Restore Our Future had any knowledge or involvement in the 'straw company' donation scheme."

"Why should a corporation be able to do it and not have it be considered illegal?" Carl Person, a New York attorney and a 2012 presidential candidate for the Libertarian Party, told AFP.

If Conrad had contributed $1 million as an individual person, "he would have had to report it as an individual to the [Romney] campaign," said Person, which then would have to "report it to the FEC."

That would be illegal.

Since the last limitations under the 1998 McCain-Feingold campaign finance law were swept away in Citizens United v. FEC, he added, it now could be open season for such hocus-pocus to take place so individuals can channel wads of cash to help corporate-friendly candidates, while posing as a corporate donor.

As of now, attorney Person said, "[corporations] cannot give money directly to a candidate, but they can spend the money themselves to benefit that candidate [through advertisements etc]."

Romney, who changes positions on many issues like some people change their socks, is clearly of the genus corporation man. He was immersed in the world of business with Bain, while sitting on the boards of directors of other firms, until about 10 years ago before taking a political trajectory—much like that of his father, former Michigan Gov. George Romney, who was an auto executive before going political with an internationalist, pro-business bent. ★

Will questionable $1 million donation derail Romney?

Ohio Restricting Ballot Access

By Mark Anderson

Ohio Secretary of State John Husted (R) has busted down third parties in that state at a time when public confidence in the nation's two dominant parties has been slipping away amid endless wars and economic turmoil. Husted wrote in an Aug. 5 letter to the state's Libertarian Party that a widely despised state bill, H.B. 194, means that all minor parties have lost their statewide ballot access, effective Sept. 30.

"In Husted's reading of H.B. 194, the Libertarian, Green, Socialist and Constitution parties that have been on the ballot since the 2008 election will have to start over to gain ballot access that they already held under a federal court ruling," the website FreePress.org noted.

On Aug. 9, Ohio's Libertarian Party filed a lawsuit for First Amendment rights and voting freedom, seeking to overturn the unsurprisingly short turnaround for collecting ballot access signatures as mandated in H.B. 194, which—as is typical of the two-party machine—places overly tight time limits for petition signature-gathering.

"Former Ohio Secretary of State Jennifer Brunner spoke on Talktainment radio Aug. 10 and was critical of Husted's letter, arguing that it was a waste of taxpayers' money to force the minor parties to sue to gain ballot access," FreePress.org also noted.

"It's an unfortunate waste of taxpayer dollars. The minor parties should prevail. But [Husted's] office will have to pay the bills out of their budget," she was quoted as saying. ★

Richard Winger runs the highly informative online newsletter Ballot Access News that chronicles the efforts of third parties not only to achieve, but more importantly to maintain, ballot access.

Winger exposes apparatchiks such as Husted who toil to maintain the current two-party trap. He also tracks the many lawsuits filed by third parties as they try to fight back against the two-party machine that operates as one, giving Americans the deceptive "conservative-liberal" political theater that makes it seem like these parties offer voters real, distinct choices that could lead to dramatic, genuine changes for the better.

The two-party duopoly gave us war-mongering Republican George W. Bush in the White House and then promised "change" under Democrat Barack Obama. Voters thought that would mean less war. But Obama has involved the U.S. military in even more countries. Now, with anger brewing against the duopoly, the Democrats and Republicans cannot allow other parties to become an effective pipeline for filling local, state and federal seats with people who have better ideas.

The political establishment's relationship with minor parties has almost always been rocky, and election officials in most states have installed and upheld unfairly high thresholds for third parties to gather enough valid signatures of registered voters to gain or maintain ballot access. The current Ohio situation is a grim reminder of this reality. ★

Globalist Insider Is Appointed a Member of Super Congress

The Senate's most globalist-oriented insider, John Kerry (D-Mass.), has been named as one of 12 members of the newly formed "Super Congress" that is programmed to make almost dictatorial budget decisions.

Kerry—a Skull and Bonesman, longtime Council on Foreign Relations elitist and a rumored attendee at the 2009 Bilderberg meeting in Greece—is also a cap-and-trade proponent who supports the implementation of global warming taxes.

Further evidence of Kerry's New World Order allegiance can be found in his selection of 2004 Bilderberg attendee former Sen. John Edwards (D-N.C.), who, it is rumored, was selected as his vice presidential running mate by corporate luminary and Bilderberg member James Johnson.

Edwards has since been embroiled in a love-child scandal, in addition to facing a potential prison sentence for improperly using campaign funds as hush money for his mistress, Rielle Hunter. The Federal Election Commission has also demanded that Edwards repay $2.3 million to the U.S. Treasury.

Lately, Kerry has made headlines for two questionable statements. First, following prolonged debt-ceiling debates, Kerry took the press to task in no uncertain terms: "I have to say this to you politely. The media in America has a bigger responsibility than it's exercising today. The media has got to begin to not give equal time or equal balance to an absolutely absurd notion just because some-

In other words, Kerry wanted the media to deny First Amendment rights to those who demand that the government should actually be forced to spend within its means.

Then, despite President Obama adding more to the national debt—in inflation-adjusted dollars—every four days than Presidents Truman and Eisenhower did from 1950 to 1960, Kerry attributed Standard & Poor's credit downgrade of the U.S. to a different source: "I believe this is, without question, a tea party downgrade." ★

Is Taxing the Rich Even Possible?

For months now, Republicans and Democrats have been debating ways to cut the budget and increase tax revenues, which include closing loopholes on large corporations and increasing the tax burden on those who earn annually $250,000 or more. National polls show that most Americans agree that taxing the rich is one of the best ways to pay down the debt. Even billionaire speculator Warren Buffet says he and others should be required to pay more as a percentage of their incomes. With the tax code so complex, is this even possible? The answer depends on who you ask.

In late July, President Ronald Reagan's domestic policy advisor Bruce Bartlett wrote in a column that the Bush tax cuts of 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004 and 2006, which disproportionately benefited those who earned more than a quarter million a year, did not help the U.S. In fact, economic growth started sputtering out at the beginning of Bush's second term. U.S. gross domestic product peaked at 3.6 percent in 2004 before settling down to 2 percent in the following years.

It is time to end the Bush tax cuts, wrote Bartlett, and increase taxes on the wealthy again.

On the other hand, independent journalist Steve McCann makes a compelling case that increasing taxes on the wealthiest Americans by even 20 percent will not help the growing deficit or the national debt.

Wrote McCann recently: "In 2008 the highest marginal tax rate of 35 percent applied to all [income] above $357,700. In that year the total amount of [income] subject to the highest rate was $622.8 billion. The government collected in taxes $218 Billion (35 percent). . . . If the highest rate of 35 percent were raised by a factor of 20 percent to 42 percent, then the additional tax revenue would be $43.5 billion, not much of a dent in the [$1.6 trillion] deficit."

And if Americans thought the rules regarding personal income taxes were ridiculous, corporate taxes are even worse. At 35 percent, the United States now has some of the highest corporate tax rates in the world.

One of the ways companies have been getting out of paying taxes in the U.S. is to move their operations abroad. Tariffs would be by far the best way to corral greedy corporate wolves like Jeffrey Immelt, CEO of GE, who are destroying the U.S. economy by closing American factories and buying goods from China and other slave-wage countries, then selling them to Americans, many of whom have been thrown out of work by ruinous free trade. ★

SPOTLIGHT ON CONGRESS

A Penny Saved for Every Dollar: Mack's Penny Plan Makes Sense

Amid various budgetary ideas that have been floated about, including the now famous cut, cap & balance, one that is beginning to receive more notice is Rep. Connie Mack's (R-Fla.) H.R.1848 that would slice a mere one cent out of every federal dollar spent. Known as the Mack Penny Plan, the legislation provides that after six years the U.S. government could for the first time in over a decade look at a balanced budget. The benefit of such an approach is twofold: Dramatic and immediate slashes would not be needed and tax increases would be completely off the table.

MACK

Mack further proposes that after six years of one-percent budget cuts across the board, Congress would cap total spending at 18 percent of GDP. In addition, an automatic spending trigger is also embedded in this bill that states: If Congress can't cut even one-percent of every federal dollar from its budget, then reductions are implemented to all programs and departments, including defense, Social Security and Medicare. ★

A Good Way to Save 18.4¢ a Gallon

Already pinched by inflation, foreclosures, unemployment and ballooning debts, American consumers no doubt feel devastated by gas prices that hover near the $4 per gallon mark. On Sept. 30 a federal tax of 18.4 cents per gallon is set to expire. Not surprisingly, the White House supports the renewal of this tax. However, Republican leaders counter that Americans' standard of living in 2011 has already been diminished to such an extent that this tax should be allowed to die. ★

'Outrage of the Year' Award?

Outrage doesn't come close to describing Sen. Jim Inhofe's (R-Okla.) reaction to news that the Environmental Protection Agency is sending $27 million to countries such as India and China to help bolster their environmental efforts, including a $718,000 grant to China. Inhofe called this move "the outrage of the year." ★

Page Program to Be Terminated

On Aug. 8, the House of Representatives officially announced that the nearly 200-year-old use of high school students acting as official congressional pages would be discontinued. One of the reasons given was the program's expense. However, over the past few decades, the page program has been sullied by some high-profile scandals involving congressmen and the minors in their employ. Maybe it's better off for these kids to stay away from such poor role models anyway. ★

Could Automobiles Be Getting 150 MPG?

By Victor Thorn

Could automobiles be getting 100 miles per gallon of gasoline if it weren't for overt manipulation by carmakers and Big Oil? According to filmmaker Jeremy Wagener, co-director of the documentary GasHole, in the 1940s inventors using a water-injected carburetor inside a 1946 Buick Roadmaster attained nearly that efficiency. Shortly thereafter, Shell Oil purchased the patent but never developed it. Ultimately the company buried this technology.

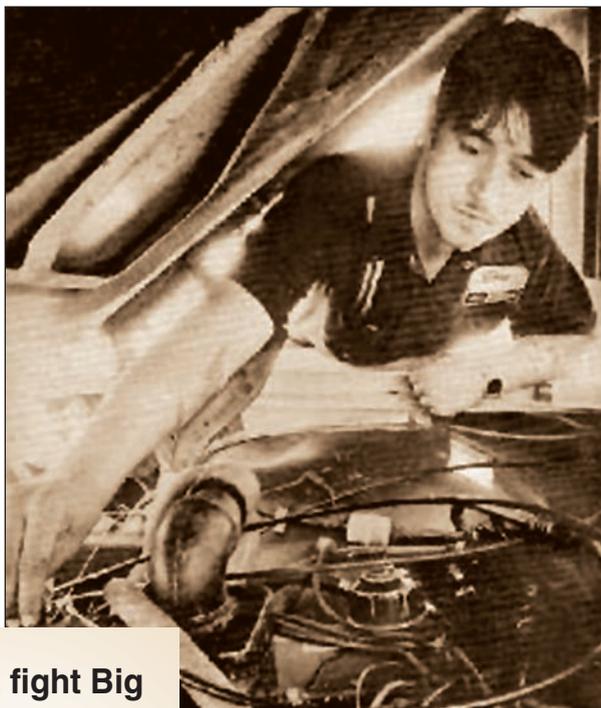

In the early 1970s, El Paso mechanic Tom Ogle created a nearly pollution-free vapor engine that surpassed the 100-mpg threshold. After Texas newspapers covered his accomplishment, authorities found Ogle dead in the desert, reportedly of a drug overdose.

During an Aug. 9 interview, Wagener told this writer, "People close to Ogle think he was assassinated. A shooting incident occurred a week before Ogle's death, and after these shots were fired at him, Ogle received police protection."

Another mysterious death is attributed to Rudolph Diesel, whose name-sake engine at first didn't use fuel extracted from crude oil, but instead relied on vegetable oil, an early version of 21st century bio-fuels. While on a cruise in 1913 prior to opening a factory that would build his engines, Diesel was lost at sea. Later his body was pulled from the English Channel.

As further proof that energy consumers are being duped, GasHole directors Wagener and Scott Roberts obtained a 1974 book published by Shell Oil entitled Fuel Economy of the Gasoline Engine where they revealed some startling results: A 1947 Studebaker got an amazing 149 miles per gallon.

When asked if he felt cars today could also be hitting triple digits in regard to fuel mileage, Wagener replied, "If we were able to fully unleash American innovation, we could certainly be getting at least 100 miles per gallon since engineers have already been working on this since the 1940s. But technology is suppressed all the time."

"If you . . . fight Big Oil, they spend tons of money on your opponent to get you unelected."

The exploitation of this supposedly scarce crude oil doesn't end with automobiles. Wagener also pointed out, "Not one new refinery has been built in the U.S. for 30 years even though demand has skyrocketed. In fact, oil companies have actually cut back on their refining capacities to increase profits. Shell even attempted to close its most profitable California refinery before being

In this context, Wagener described what he learned while making this film: "The price of a barrel of oil is not the true price or true reflection of supply and demand or the cost of producing this product and bringing it to market. It's influenced by other factors, and that's why it is difficult for consumers to determine what causes prices to go up and down."

When questioned about the identity of these hidden influences, Wagener specifically named lobbyists for Big Oil, various legislative boards with unelected members, collusion between auto manufacturers and energy companies, and the undue influence exerted upon lawmakers.

Wagener proceeded to paraphrase the words of Sen. Tom Udall (D-N.M.): "If you go into Congress and fight Big Oil, they spend tons of money on your opponent to get you unelected. But if you're a friend, these same companies spend lots of money to keep you in."

AFP asked Wagener about John D. Rockefeller's famous quote, "Competition is a sin."

Wagener replied, "That's what our problem is. I don't fault anyone for making money, but I'm afraid that the free market isn't free. That's what the real issue is."

Lawyers Rake in Piles of Cash; 9-11 Responders Get Zero

By Pat Shannan

The term “Ground Zero” has new meaning for World Trade Center clean-up worker Edgar Galvis. Suffering from a variety of illnesses he contracted while removing toxic debris from the destroyed offices of Merrill Lynch next to the WTC site, he sued, won and was expecting $10,000 as his share of the settlement. Instead, he received a cordial letter from his lawyers saying, “It was our pleasure to represent you in this matter,” with a check attached in the amount of zero dollars. The attorneys’ fees had eaten up the entire settlement and zeroed him out.

Galvis, 51, is now unemployed with throat cancer and is $30,000 in debt. After opening the envelope, he thought it was a joke, but the devastating fact was that it was real.

His representatives from Worby Groner Edelman & Napoli Bern, a law firm representing about 90 percent of the police officers, firefighters, rescuers and clean-up workers suing New York City, is set to collect at least $210.4 million, say New York news outlets.

John Walcott, a retired New York Police Department detective with leukemia, used the term “atrocious” in describing the paltry payments to sick and injured workers. “People are losing homes, sick and dying,” he told one prominent New York newspaper. “The lawyers are just getting wealthier.”

About 10,500 police officers, firefighters, rescuers and clean-up workers are suing over claims they contracted chronic conditions and diseases from working in the toxic smoke and dust-laden air around Ground Zero.

The payouts are being calculated on a point system supposedly based on the severity of the illness—but the largest, as well as fastest, settlements are going to those with asthma and respiratory ailments. These are the least challenged because of the likelihood of them coming from the toxic air of 9-11. Those with cancerous tumors are having more difficulty in proving that they were caused by their cleanup work.

Consequently, workers with non-life-threatening illnesses are getting far more than those whose lives have been effectively ended because of the dangerous surroundings in which they were unwittingly placed. One case cited the illogical payment of $5,800 to ironworker Brad Bonaparte, 48, a father of six who is dying of advanced esophageal cancer, while a worker with asthma is in line for 30 times that much.

“It’s not enough to pay for his burial,” said Bonaparte’s outraged lawyer, Gregory Cannata. “This is a disgrace.”

Further bad news for the sick Ground Zero workers came last month when a report was announced there was no link between the Ground Zero site and cancers sub-

One NYPD detective with leukemia used the term “atrocious” in describing the paltry payments.

Massive amounts of toxins were released into the air in New York City following the Sept. 11 attacks. History of Illegal Experiments on Citizens Documented

By Lisa Becker

Torture and mind manipulation has been going on across the United States for over two decades. Victim testimony points to what is one of the biggest human rights abuse in this nation’s history. Directed Energy Weapons (DEW) are no doubt responsible for most of the complaints, and they are being used by military, law enforcement and security agencies. Our country has a long record of government using people without their knowledge or consent in military and medical experimentation.

Thanks to the Alliance for Human Research Protection, here are a few examples of past abuses:

- U.S. tests mustard gas on thousands of servicemen;
- Manhattan Project injects plutonium into soldiers;
- CIA tests LSD on human subjects without their knowledge;
- CIA sponsors Dr. Ewen Cameron in sleep deprivation combined with drugs for mental de-patterning of test subjects;
- Dr. Joseph Stokes of University of Pennsylvania

LSD experiments and their results are detailed in nearly 20,000 MK ULTRA documents, declassified in 1977. The goal of the project was to research methods of mind control and extract information during interrogations.

- infests 200 women with viral hepatitis;
- U.S. Army and University of Pennsylvania conduct psychological experiments on hundreds of people in Pennsylvania;

- Injection of uranium into unsuspecting patients at Massachusetts General Hospital;
- CIA mind control experiments in MK-ULTRA;
- Willowbrook School children injected with hepatitis without their knowledge;
- Spread of radioactive materials in Point Hope, Alaska by Atomic Energy Commission;
- U.S. Army introduces bio-weapon into New York subway tunnels;
- Tuskegee Syphilis Study; and
- Human radiation experiments.

Why would anyone be surprised that non-lethal weapons are now being tested without our knowledge or consent? Despite all the evidence that military and law enforcement are using non-lethal weapons on Americans, legislators have not responded with a congressional investigation. News agencies are also ignoring what many consider to be one of the most serious acts of domestic terrorism this country has ever seen. ★

Mainstream Censors Radiation Threat

By Frank Whalen

For several months, there has been a news blackout in the United States concerning the devastation and human suffering caused by a 9.0 earthquake that rocked the east coast of Japan on March 11. The resulting tsunami claimed nearly 16,000 lives and made hundreds of thousands homeless.

On the island of Honshu, three reactors at the Daiichi nuclear power facility in Fukushima went into full meltdown. Explosions and fires caused additional damage to other reactors and released vast quantities of poisonous radioactive materials into the environment. Livestock, crops and drinking water within a 75-mile radius of the accident were immediately contaminated. Now, reports of lethal doses of radiation as far as 200 miles away are starting to become more commonplace.

In the United States, a recent report by Janette Sherman, M.D. and epidemiologist Joseph Mangano indicate a 35-percent spike in infant mortality throughout the Pacific Northwest.

Meanwhile, the true extent of the damage and radioactive contamination caused by the Fukushima disaster continues to be downplayed or ignored entirely by the mainstream media.

Getting to the truth has been difficult.

“Fukushima is the biggest industrial catastrophe in the history of mankind,” says Arnold Gunderson, a nuclear power expert who served as an expert witness in the investigation of the Three Mile Island accident.

In an exclusive interview with AFP, Gunderson gives a timely assessment of the ongoing crisis in Japan and apprises us of what he expects to unfold in the future.

“On the bright side, the reactors are in better condition than they’ve been in the last three months,” said Gunderson. “Right now, TEPCO has managed to avoid cre-

Above, in early August, workers toiled to remove vegetation before they could begin the arduous and dangerous task of decontaminating the soil in the area around Fukushima, Japan. ating new pools of contaminated water by treating existing water through the Areva system.”

Areva is a process, devised by a French firm of the same name, whereby radioactive isotopes are bound together by chemicals that are injected into the contaminated water of a reactor’s cooling system.

Gunderson continued, “They’re cooling the reactors by pouring treated water into the top and onto the floor. That has a tendency to build up lots more radioactivity in the filters that are trapping it, but it’s not building up any more water, and that’s a good thing because they’ve run out of space on site.”

“What’s happening off site is frightening,” says Gunderson. “Dangerous levels of radioactive contamination are being found in kids’ urine, mothers’ breast milk and animal meat. I’m estimating that over the course of the next 20 years, there’ll be a million cancers. If they’re not caught soon enough, many of those will be fatal.”

“The first cancers will affect the thyroids,” Gunderson predicts. “They take about three years. In three to five years it’ll move on to the lungs. In the northern prefectures, I expect a 20 percent increase in lung cancers.”

Instead of taking steps to raise public awareness about the dangers of exposure to contaminated food products that will contribute to these cancer risks, the Japanese government is doing just the opposite. “They’re raising the radiation standards,” Gunderson reports. “Before, 600 becquerels [measure of radioactivity] were the most you could have in beef. Now they’ve raised the bar to 6,000. They’re telling people it’s safe.”

These standards are also being applied to humans. According to Gunderson, “Kids are now allowed to get the same dosages as adult nuclear workers would get in the U.S. It’s a complete distortion of radiation physics.”

Another recent development that has Gunderson concerned is the buildup of radioactive sewage that poses a catastrophic risk to drinking water. “Before the accident, they used to turn the sewage into building blocks,” says Gunderson. “Now they can’t. So they have these enormous piles of sewage sludge that can’t be disposed of. It’s not yet in the ground water, but it’s heading that way.”

The Japanese have also initiated a campaign to get people to return to homes as close as 20 miles from the site of the accident. They’re clearing streets and playgrounds, but everything else is still contaminated. “On the sides of the roads where the runoff is, we’re seeing 50,000-60,000 becquerels in a pound of dirt,” adds Gunderson.

Inside the 20-mile radius, Gunderson said: “It’s all ghost towns. No one is walking around except stray dogs and cattle. . . . [I]t’s a nightmare.”

Though these are disturbing developments in themselves, Gunderson has saved the worst for last. “My biggest concern is that the Japanese are burning rubbish,” he says. “Farmers in rural areas are burning their contaminated crops and those in urban areas are burning their trash. If two pounds of material has less than 8,000 becquerels, the government allows it to be burned.”

Gunderson says the government also allows blending of highly contaminated material with material that isn’t, creating an even more lethal mix that, when burned, re-volatilizes the deadly, cancer-inducing cesium. The resulting plumes not only drift into neighboring communities, he said, but are also caught up in wind currents that reach the western coast of the United States and Canada. ★

Operation Shady RAT Smells Fishy

By Frank Whalen

Is it possible the massive cyber attacks known as Operation Shady RAT uncovered Aug. 3 by a U.S. firm were actually orchestrated to frame China? Shady RAT is the most comprehensive computer network attack to take place in years. In this case, cyber-criminals from a yet-to-be-determined location stole data from computers belonging to over 70 different governments, non-profit agencies and corporations in 14 countries.

So far, all eyes have been on China, but it remains to be seen who exactly was behind this operation that targeted so many private and governmental organizations. According to published reports, the world may never know.

One possibility being discussed is that Shady RAT originated in the United States.

In the May 2 edition, AFP reported on U.S. hacker Albert Gonzalez, who claimed he was in the federal government's employ when he hacked into computers owned by a major U.S. company and stole 170 million files in an operation known as TJX. In 2010, The New York Times reported that "[Gonzalez] said there were 'major chains and big hacks that would dwarf TJX. I'm just waiting for them to indict us for the rest of them.'"

Gonzalez's TJX hack was unraveled in its breathtaking scope in January 2009 around the same time that others began picking up on Shady RAT's trail.

Dmitri Alperovitch, vice president of threat research at the technology security company McAfee, first discovered Operation Shady RAT. The story was then broken by Vanity Fair on Aug. 2, wherein the reporter wrote, "Alperovitch first picked up the trail of Shady RAT in early 2009 when a McAfee client, a U.S. defense contractor, identified suspicious programs running on its network." The report also revealed, "Last week, Alperovitch provided confidential briefings on Shady RAT to senior White House officials, executive-branch agencies and congressional-committee staff."

This information is especially newsworthy because on Aug. 5, another story broke regarding S&P's downgrade of the U.S. credit rating. One of the first to complain was China. CNN Money reported that the Chinese-government-owned Xinhua news agency ran a commentary piece the next day declaring, "China, the largest creditor of the world's sole superpower, has every right to demand the United States address its structural debt problems and ensure the safety of China's dollar assets."

Vanity Fair's piece affirmed, "Alperovitch believes the hacking was state-sponsored." VF goes on to quote James A. Lewis, director of the Technology and Public Policy Program at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, as saying, "All signs point to China."

Although China is notorious for hacking into computer systems, even those owned by its own citizens, could these cyber attacks have been utilized as a form of psychological warfare? In other words, is it possible that the perpetrators of Shady RAT are using it to blame China in order to incite Western animosity against the Chinese government?

After all, the United States already has a history of computer espionage that includes spreading viruses to foreign countries.

Wired reported in January that the Stuxnet worm deployed against Iran "appears to be a joint U.S.-Israeli collaboration," yet Mobilmedia ran a story in late July that said, "The Stuxnet worm may strike again, U.S. officials warn, possibly posing a significant threat to government attempts to improve cyber-defense measures."

Is it possible that the perpetrators of Shady Rat are using it to incite Western animosity against the Chinese regime?

Why would the U.S. be worried about its own cyber-weapon unless it was attempting to bolster the plausible deniability factor?

In the complex world of cyber espionage, it's often impossible to ascertain who is precisely behind these kinds of operations. On the other hand, during a time where U.S. finances are a source of shame, wouldn't it be strategic to create animosity toward the very country that owns the most U.S. debt? ★

Justice Files Suit to Hamstring Alabama's New Immigration Law

By Pete Papaherakles

Alabama's tough new immigration law has prompted the Justice Department to file a lawsuit against the state in an effort to stop it from going into effect on Sept. 1. State officials have vowed to fight back, arguing that the federal government's failure to enforce its own immigration statutes has forced them to do so.

Alabama's law, H.B. 56, mandates the following: Illegal immigrants cannot attend public schools; police must detain those stopped for any violation who cannot prove their legal status; it is a crime to knowingly harbor or transport an illegal immigrant; and an employer will be penalized for employing someone without legal resident status.

Alabama Senate President Pro Tem Del Marsh (R) said Alabama's illegal immigrant population has increased 400 percent in the last decade, while the federal government has looked the other way.

"With almost one out of every 10 Alabamians looking for a job, we need to make sure that legal Alabama residents are not being passed over for employment in lieu of those who are here illegally," said Marsh.

Alabama House Speaker Mike Hubbard (R) added that legislation signed into law in June would survive any court challenge.

"Alabama is not going to be a sanctuary state for illegal immigrants," he said. "Alabama will have a strict immigration law, and we will enforce it."

Unfortunately, the U.S. Justice Department doesn't see it that way, and last year Arizona's attempts to do the same were blocked by a federal judge. Will Alabama be more successful?

The Justice Department argues that Alabama's law "undermines the federal government's careful balance of immigration enforcement priorities and objectives." Attorney General Eric Holder says the immigration problem cannot be addressed through a patchwork of state laws.

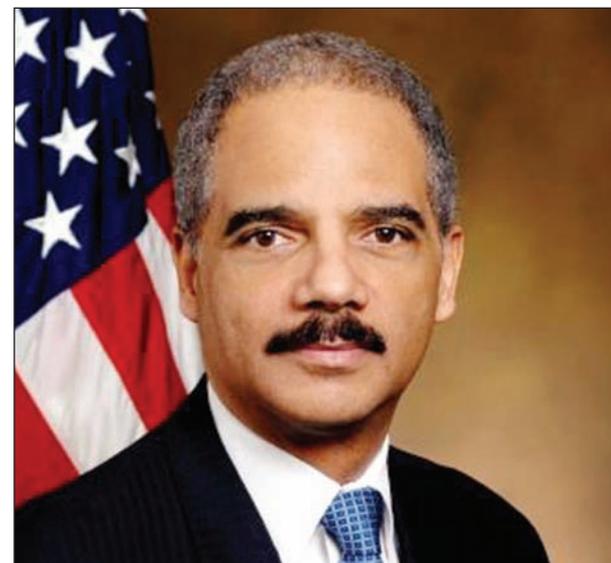

"To the extent we find state laws that interfere with the federal government's enforcement of immigration law, we are prepared to bring suit, as we did in Arizona," says Holder, who appears to have a misunderstanding of the word "enforcement."

He also does not seem to be aware of the Constitution's Tenth Amendment, which consists of only 28 words: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people." Nowhere in the Constitution does it say that the United States has the right to prevent each state from defending its citizens from alien invasion.

Alabama House Majority Leader Mickey Hammon (R), who authored the law, said Obama administration officials have "turned a blind eye toward the immigration Justice argues that Alabama's law undermines the federal government's immigration enforcement priorities.

Bars states from protecting their own citizens.

issue and refuse to fulfill their constitutional duty to enforce laws already on the books. Now they want to block our efforts to secure Alabama's borders and prevent our jobs and taxpayer dollars from disappearing into the abyss of illegal immigration causes."

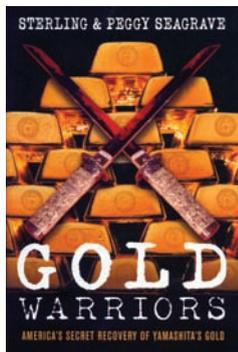

One has to wonder about Holder's motives. Not only is he not protecting Americans from illegal immigration, he is also not allowing them to protect themselves. He is clearly acting against the welfare and interests of law-abiding, taxpaying Americans.

The time has come for states to stand up to the tyranny of the central government. To go against Alabama's commonsense solution to this vital problem that is destroying and bankrupting our country is simply anti-American. Alabama, you are in our prayers. ★

Gold Warriors America's Secret Recovery of Yamashita's Gold

By Peggy and Sterling Seagrave. In 1945, U.S. intelligence officers in Manila discovered that the Japanese had hidden large quantities of gold bullion and other looted treasure in the Philippines. President Truman decided to recover the gold but to keep its riches secret. These, combined with Japanese treasure recovered during the U.S. occupation, and with recovered Nazi loot, would create a worldwide American political action fund to fight communism. This "Black Gold" gave Washington virtually limitless, unaccountable funds, providing an asset base to reinforce the treasuries of America's allies, to bribe political and military leaders and to manipulate elections in foreign countries for more than 50 years. Softcover, #GOW, 365 pages, $22 plus $3 S&H. Order from FIRST AMENDMENT BOOKS, 645 Pennsylvania Avenue SE, #100, Washington, D.C. 20003. Can the FDIC Really Cover All Its IOUs?

By Frank Whalen

Outside every bank are signs that read: “Deposits backed by the full faith and credit of the United States government.” But, as financial institutions continue to fail across the country, perhaps it’s time for concern.

“Full faith and credit” sounds impressive, but in actuality it’s more of a promise than a legally binding requirement.

According to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), today there are 8,400 FDIC-insured commercial banks in the United States. Out of that, reports the FDIC, more than 1,000 of them are struggling or are on the brink of failure. So far this year, 64 banks have shut their doors. In 2010, there were 157 bank failures, 140 in 2009 and 25 in 2008.

The FDIC estimates that the cost to bail out depositors in failing banks could run more than $100 billion in the next 12 months—a huge sum, considering that only a few years ago former FDIC Chairman Sheila Bair said in a letter to bank CEOs, “without substantial amounts of additional assessment revenue in the near future, current projections indicate that the fund balance will approach zero or even become negative.”

On Oct. 3, 2008, the FDIC raised the insurable amount on a bank account from $100,000 to $250,000. Given that, the FDIC could be on the hook for considerable sums should there be another rash of bank failures.

The FDIC is a corporation, and considering that the mood in Congress today is definitely anti-bailout, the FDIC could fail. What would happen to all the Americans who have placed their life savings in banks believing that their money is safe?

But there’s more: Is there language buried deep inside FDIC regulations that would allow it to delay payments to depositors for up to 100 years? Some say so.

Many have inquired over the years about a supposed 99-year window the FDIC has to repay insured funds to banking customers. In its attempt to dispel this rumor, the FDIC responded in 2006 with the following statement. “This is a completely false notion that many bank customers have told us they heard from someone attempting to sell them another kind of financial product.

The truth is, though, federal law actually states: “in case of the liquidation of, or other closing or winding up of the affairs of, any insured depository institution, payment of the insured deposits in such institution shall be made by the corporation as soon as possible.”

Aside from the blatant lie about federal law requirements, the statement’s ambiguity should inspire more raised eyebrows than comfort. “As soon as possible” is, of course, a relative phrase and one that can be stretched into infinity without any punitive force of law to mandate an actual deadline. The FDIC adds that, “historically” payments are made “within a few days.” But that isn’t even remotely more definitive than the actual FDIC regulations.

For perspective, the U.S. tax code, which states what monies the government can collect from Americans, is 3.4 million words long.

When it comes to paying trusting bank customers, however, the FDIC offers just four: “As soon as possible.” And that could be 100 years. ★

Iranian Oil Independence Scares Israel, U.S.

By Richard Walker

If the Obama administration thought sanctions would drive Iran to bankruptcy, it had better think again. The appointment of a former Iranian Revolutionary Guard commander to the presidency of OPEC, the world's premier oil cartel, has sent shivers through the corridors of power in Washington and Tel Aviv. So, too, has Iran's oil trading bourse, which is now up and running. A bourse is a commodity market.

Just like Iran, some of OPEC's members favor ending the use of the dollar as the world's main oil trading currency. China, one of the world's biggest oil consumers, has been buying large quantities of oil and gas from the Iranians since 2007 and has paid in euros.

As it stands, Iran sits on the world's fourth largest oil reserves and the second biggest natural gas reserves. Much to the consternation of Washington, India too has ignored these sanctions while running up an oil bill with Iran to the tune of billions of euros. In a snub to the White House, India has even agreed to pay Iran using banking mechanisms in Turkey, a NATO member.

When all is said and done, the hawks in Washington and Tel Aviv repeat their usual drumbeat that Iran should be attacked because of its nuclear policy, but the truth is that oil and gas drive U.S./Israeli foreign policy regarding Iran, too.

In fact, the target on Iran got bigger after 2008 when it opened its own oil-trading bourse, enabling it to bypass sanctions and avoid the manipulation of oil markets by the London Petroleum Exchange and New York's Mercantile Exchange. BP and massive Wall Street firms like Goldman Sachs own the New York exchange, and they realize if Iran can move OPEC away from trading in the dollar, their profits will plummet. Ultimately, the two exchanges will begin to lose control of shaping global supply and demand, and the dollar will take a massive hit.

When one takes a good look at anti-Iranian statements from members of Congress and Israeli leaders, it's easy to see that the prospect of a potential petrodollar death is keeping them awake at night. Israel is already being hit hard economically because it can no longer get cheap oil and gas from Egypt. Further, Iran and Egypt are doing business again and have agreed to end the cheap energy Israel got for years from Washington's former ally, the deposed Egyptian dictator Hosni Mubarak.

Iran's creation of a bourse, through which it is now selling its oil using currencies of its choosing, has been applauded by India, China, Venezuela and Russia.

Tel Aviv and Washington have been quiet for months about Iran, but expect that to soon change as threats to the petrodollar increase.

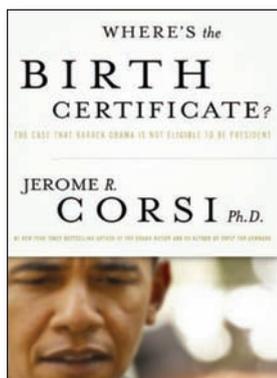

This summer, 81 members of Congress—55 Republicans and 26 Democrats—received gifts of vacations in Israel. The American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a powerful, Washington-based Israeli lobby group, funded all of these freebie trips.

CIA operative Robert Baer agrees that Iran is in the sights of the United States and Israel. Baer recently told a national radio talk show host that his sources in Israel claim the U.S. and Israeli militaries are quietly making preparations to attack the Iranians as soon as this fall. As evidence, Baer cites the departure of Defense Secretary William Gates, who vehemently opposed attacking Iran, along with the recent buildup of U.S. aircraft carrier fleets in the Persian Gulf. ★

Where's the Birth Certificate?

The Case That Barack Obama Is Not Eligible to Be President

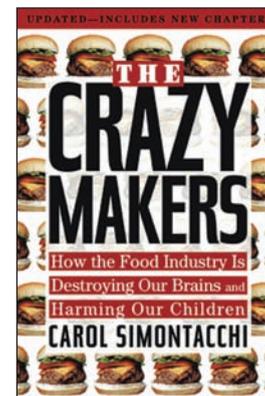

Is Barack Obama illegally occupying the Oval Office? Is Barack Obama a natural-born citizen of the United States? Is he constitutionally eligible to be president? Repeated national polls suggest tens of millions of Americans don't think he is eligible to be president, despite his release of an online image of his purported birth document. In Where's the Birth Certificate?, bestselling author Jerome Corsi demonstrates conclusively that no legal authority has ever verified Obama's legal eligibility to be president, that glaring inconsistencies, blackouts and outright fabrications in his life narrative have generated widespread doubts, and that, in fact, a compelling body of evidence says Obama is not a natural-born citizen as is required of all presidents by the Constitution. Hardback, 392 pages, #WTC, $28. Don't Compromise With Truth

THE RYAN REPORT from Vince Ryan

Most of us have heard the saying that politics is the art of the possible. Implicit in this is the condition that circumstances have a lot to do with the practice of politics. There are some who would not call politics an art but a "science." There are political science departments in universities and colleges. Sometimes these departments are called government departments and offer courses in government.

Often those who major in political science decide on the law as a profession, but there are many law professors who prefer their students to come well grounded in history, English and writing rather than with preconceived notions of politics and law.

Those young lawyers and political science majors who venture into the world of politics will soon learn, according to Gallup, that six out of 10 persons opt for compromise when their elected politicians, especially those in Congress, can't resolve a legislative stalemate. Democrats, Republicans and independents like to think of the work of the bipartisan panel that will determine how to cut the deficit. But why is compromise so difficult to achieve? Perhaps it is because the people are politicized and refuse to accept any compromise.

What has happened is that the people and elected politicians live in a world unlike the old Washington of high society relationships when members of both political parties and their families socialized comfortably.

Today members of Congress lead a fast-paced life. Their families remain at home, and they commute on weekends to visit not only their families but powerful constituents and leaders of pressure groups who see to it that the office holders are doing what they were sent to Washington to do. It is a fact that representatives and senators have the responsibility for doing their jobs, but the authority is held by those who control them.

Americans like to live, work and worship with people with whom they feel comfortable. The idea that Americans want to live in "melting pots" is nonsense. The promoters of the multi-cultural world are out of touch with the people they claim to represent. Germany is a case in point.

In earlier days American people of various national origins preferred to live in areas with their own kind. The Irish-Americans preferred predominantly Irish neighborhoods. The same goes for Polish-, German-, Italian- and French-Americans, as well as African-, Chinese- and Korean-Americans. Religion also played a big role where they lived: Catholics, Protestants and Jews preferred to live and be educated in their own neighborhoods.

Those of like political thinking tend to reinforce one another. The tea party movement is a good case in point. Its members will have no truck with compromise. If they did, their movement would decline and vanish away.

Those who compromise their beliefs and principles have neither beliefs nor principles and deserve to lose everything. ★

Principal Dismissed for Thought Crimes

COMMENTARY by William White

The archdiocese of New York has fired popular Catholic school principal Frank Borzellieri over his so-called racist views. They decided that "white supremacists" should not be allowed to serve in a position where they help black and Mexican children, as that would be racist.

Borzellieri served as the principal of Our Lady of Mount Carmel School, an institution attempting to educate underprivileged youth in New York's inner cities. The Catholic Church was aware of Borzellieri's views when they promoted him to the principal position two years ago.

The priest responsible, Father Eric Rapaglia, had previously written articles in support of Borzellieri, but when Borzellieri's views were made public and embarrassed the church, Rapaglia repudiated them and removed Borzellieri from his position.

In an Aug. 3 commentary, Billy Hallowell wrote: "According to archdiocese spokesman Joseph Zwilling, school officials reviewed Borzellieri's books and columns and found that he espoused white supremacist views that were at odds with the church's mission and values. The former principal was let go following a New York Daily News article." In other words, white folks shouldn't try to help people of other races because that's "racist." Go figure. ★

Super Congress Dog & Pony Show Opens in D.C.

TOUGH TALK from Jim Traficant

America's debt has finally reached the point of being politically no longer feasible. The debt is so overpowering that Congress can't handle it. They just can't offer a solution.

Even though Congress has finance committees, revenue committees, ways and means committees, budget committees and trade committees, they've finally admitted the debt is too big for these respective committees of jurisdiction.

So, a "Super Congress" has been created, consisting of 12 members appointed from the House of Representatives and the Senate. They'll face the task of finding $1.5 trillion in additional deficit reduction this fall.

The new debt deal signed by Barack Obama includes a provision that calls for this Super Congress to do what both houses have failed to control with an overabundance of previously existing committees.

There are more chairmen and chairwomen in Congress than you can imagine. Yet nobody has done one thing to stop America's demise, which seems inescapable.

Standard and Poor's dropped the U.S. government rating from AAA to AA+, the first such reduction of Uncle Sam's stellar credit rating in history. The White House lashed out that the rating reduction was a miscalculation.

Truth is, the action taken by Standard and Poor's is solid. The United States is beginning to show its stretch marks. We are going downhill, folks, and we've yet to see bottom.

But don't worry, and be happy; there's now a Super Congress that will solve this financial mess. Doesn't that fill you with confidence?

Meanwhile, lobbyists and donors have already said they are gearing up to spend millions this fall to influence the decisions of this super group. As a result, watchdog groups are calling on appointed members of this super group to sign a two-part pledge "agreeing to cease all political fundraising for themselves, their party, and for other candidates and to provide full transparency on any meetings with outside groups or individuals regarding the committee's work, including lobbyists, corporate CEOs or donors."

This pledge was organized by campaign-finance watchdog Public Campaign and signed by Alliance for a Just Society, Campaign for America's Future, Common Cause and Voices for Progress, in addition to a dozen other watchdog entities.

Some say the super group is needed to remove politics from the process. Let's hope it's not just another blue-ribbon dog and pony show.

Get back at me. ★

Norway and Gun Control

The most important thing about the Norwegian massacre was not mentioned in your article in the Aug. 8 issue. The fact is the massacre was a perfect example of a country in which private ownership of guns is not allowed. In the United States, a mass murderer would not have lived 90 minutes to kill 76 people at his leisure. He would be lucky to have 90 seconds before someone in the crowd who was armed would have shot him.

RIGHTS ARE UNALIENABLE

Frank Whalen, in his article titled "Arkansas Mayor Battles City Council Over Plan to Ban Free Speech," which was published in the Aug. 15 issue, quotes Mayor Earnest Nash as saying the city council of Gould, Ark. "is in violation of the U.S. Constitution" or that one must "be a student of both the state and the U.S. Constitution."

Hogwash! The governing document here is the Arkansas Constitution, where Article 2, Sections 4 and 6, read, respectively: "The right of the people peaceably to assemble, to consult for the common good; and to petition by petition, by address and remonstrance, the government, or any department thereof, shall never be abridged. . . . The liberty of the press shall forever remain inviolate. The free communication of thoughts and opinions, is one of the invaluable rights of man; and all persons may freely write and publish their sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of such right. . . ."

The Bill of Rights is a set of restrictions the states placed upon their just-created federal government. When the Supreme Court strikes down a state law that violates one's rights, they are protecting the right, not enforcing the Bill of Rights. Rights are unalienable; they are not dependent on any document for their existence.

TIME TO SECEDE

I believe Jeff Stone has the right idea when it comes to the proposal that southern California should secede from the Golden State. AFP covered this issue in the July 18 and 25 edition.

We are a republic of separate, sovereign states. And as such we have no need of an "uncle," who resides in something called a district, which is not even a state.

Our union of states and the people therein are perfectly capable of conducting our own sovereign affairs. And we the people, through the application of our own nearly forgotten common sense, are perfectly equipped to take charge of our own preservation.

Therefore, it should not be a matter of seceding from the union, but of denying "uncle" his district existence, before it's too late.

HOW TO HANDLE FREE TRADERS

I totally agree with Willis A. Carto's article "Free Traders: Hang 'Em or Ignore 'Em?" [published in the Aug. 8 edition]. A few years ago our congressman, Tim Walberg (R-Mich.), when asked about tariffs snarled, "Oh, let's not go there." Then he threw out some bogus claim that "the jobs are going to other states and not to foreign countries." I'm sure some lobbyist told him to say that if asked about tariffs. He then quickly dismissed the issue and went on to another topic.

ONE QUESTION TO ASK THE PRESIDENT

In the spirit of George Washington, Americans have always pursued the truth. Our current president, however, hides the truth, denies the truth, lies about the truth. As Obama goes out among the electorate, they should openly and repeatedly ask if he was born in Kenya. Just one question constantly repeated would do wonders for the truth. It is a question of high leverage. If he refuses to answer, the answer is "Yes." If he denies being born in a foreign country, he will prove he is no George Washington.

Rick Perry sells out to Communist China and the New World Order even more than Bill Clinton. No wonder the false patriots love him. Take a couple of minutes to counteract the "Ministry of Truth." Google "Rick Perry China Loves Him" for more.

WHO WAS CHEATING?

Just received the current issue with Pat Shannan's great piece on the Atlanta schools cheating scandal. However, there is one more important ingredient that Shannan may not have been aware of, and as a local resident I am: The 179 participating teachers, the 13 administrators that gave the orders, and all the students (the ultimate victims) were black.

COVERAGE OF THE ANTHONY CASE

In the Aug. 8 edition of AFP, readers were asked if they thought AFP should cover stories like the murder of baby Caylee Anthony, which are popular in the mainstream media. The following is a sampling of the thoughtful letters we received on the matter, which were evenly 50-50 for and against.

KUDOS TO VICTOR THORN

I believe AFP should cover any media event when the other side of the story needs to be told. Keep up the good work, Victor Thorn. It think it would help sell AFP subscriptions.

ALBERT S. KEYSER

AFP COUNTERS BIG MEDIA LIES

I say unequivocally, yes. The everyday stuff is important especially when the mainstream media is not telling us the whole story. When AFP covers the story for us, it becomes far clearer just how much we are being lied to by the news organizations.

I would like to recommend another case long neglected and so obvious: Any blind fool could have recognized that the crime scene and the body of JonBenet Ramsey had been thoroughly cleaned by professionals, setting up a false scenario for police.

SCOTT IRVING
Maine

FORGET THE GARBAGE

I most definitely do not think that AFP should cover such garbage as the Casey Anthony trial although I have deep sorrow for the innocent victims of such crimes. Believe me: I'm on your side politically and morally. I despise the Zionist-Masonic-controlled news media and the "powers that be" that finance the deception, lies and cultural-Marxist propaganda. But please avoid these cases.

ANDREW REAGAN

CONCENTRATE ON THE BIG ISSUES

I say no. AFP needs to concentrate on issues of major importance as it now does. Casey Anthony and Caylee Anthony-type stories are distractions the major, corrupt press and other media use to fixate the ignorant on.

New Report on "Surviving A Panic" Reveals...

Which Items Instantly Vanish From Store Shelves In A Crisis!

Recently one of our researchers completed the definitive report on the top 77 items that literally vanish from store shelves "faster than a rabbit" when hurricanes, earthquakes and killer snowstorms threaten. Yep. It's the stuff that gets hoarded when people freak out about an unknown future. It's also the stuff that will disappear the quickest in the midst of a food shortage or other economic crisis. Every American needs to read this report as soon as humanly possible.

I'm serious. This might be your only opportunity to get the new report on how to stay alive in a panic driven crisis. And let me tell you...

It's Truly Mind-Blowing!

As you can imagine, we've received nothing but glowing testimonials from the few readers who have read the report so far. These folks now know to take decisive action when things start to turn chaotic. I've had people tell me that they were blown away by the report because it was so brutally honest about what to expect from human behavior when you take some of the structure of civilization away from them!

I agree. There isn't anything else like it on the planet!

And the best part is, everything you'll learn in this report called "Gone Before You Get There" is easy to learn how to do. You'll master becoming prepared in no time with this report in your hands. Each tactic puts you in the driver's seat and you'll know exactly what to expect when polite society breaks down...

Before Anyone Else!

You're going to love this new report. It's all about keeping your family alive and well when the grocery store no longer has the things you've grown to depend on. And let me tell you, it's amazing!

The report shows you a ton of ways to get out of any mess that a panic driven shortage or meltdown may bring your way. Even veteran "survivalists" get their eyes opened from this report!

Like when the power goes out and it's freezing cold outside. The report shows you how to stay warm when everyone else is getting cold!

Or, instead of not having a flush toilet, you can flush all you want whenever you want!!

You'll also learn...

- The things you absolutely must have in your house before any crisis strikes.
- How to have all the pure drinking water you need without buying an expensive filter!
- Which 3 food items have an almost indefinite shelf life
- 4 grains that have a two year shelf life

One section teaches you about using grills and solar cookers when you're hungry.

Sometimes in a crisis you can't buy medications. You'll learn what to do "for meds" in an emergency.

PLUS, you'll learn how much cash to have on hand and exactly where to stash it!

Next, the report gives you 16 non-food items that your life may come to depend on. This list is so important that you are genuinely putting your family's lives at risk if you don't have the items on THIS list.

How To Get Out Of The Most Dangerous Situations In The World!

Probably the most perilous predicament to be in during a panic is not having the basics of everyday living. Americans depend on drug stores, grocery stores and hardware stores. But think about what it would be like if... ALL of them were closed.

Listen: When desperate people can't get what they want... when they want it... they tend to freak out. That's life in America when the stores ARE open. Think about millions of spoiled rotten American consumers staring at "CLOSED" signs on all the stores they normally depend on.

During the coming food shortage, folks will really panic which will make matters worse by a factor of a hundred. Faced with closed stores, some people will give up altogether... and wait for the government to save them. Others will get weapons and take from those weaker than they. As we have learned in recent history in the U.S., hungry people don't hesitate to take what they want.

But the report shows you a dozen devastatingly powerful but simple ways that can get you out of any situation like this - that's right, ANY shortage or crisis - in an instant! Plus, this report "turns the table on both the grid and the system"!

This information can only be found in this report. No one outside of the writer has access to this information. Honestly... you will be among a handful of people on the planet who are privileged to have this knowledge!

One of the things the report tells you to buy (which I can guarantee you've never seen before) can easily be the one single thing that keeps you alive!

The report also discusses society's "pressure points" that you must watch for to alert you of the coming storm. If you do, you'll predict panics and be able to prepare for trouble...

Ahead Of The Crowd!

Even if you are caught with no food in the house, this report shows you easy ways to use your imagination and a little ingenuity to come up with more food than you can possibly eat.

Then, the report shows you what to do in the event you have to get the hell out of Dodge! Knowing when and how to evacuate becomes pretty darn important in a breakdown.

Or if you find yourself in a flood, tornado or earthquake - the report tells you how to get to safety in a hurry.

Or if you find yourself confronted by "desperate" strangers.

Plus, you'll learn how to turn an ordinary garden into a survival garden and grow enough food for everyone.

And here's a nasty situation to be in: You need food right away. Stores are closed and your house is completely out of food. The report shows you how to find a source of food that 99 out of 100 people won't know about. And find it fast.

Frankly, almost no one has a way out of this predicament. But the report has a clever section that enables you to have plenty of "new found" food when you need it most. This is awesome.

The report also shows you...

- What to do when the power goes out.
- How to make sure your family gets plenty of critical proteins.
- 8 survival habits that can save your life.
- Exciting reasons to reconsider a solar backup.
- Why you need more water in a crisis.
- How to deal with severe cold!
- Fascinating, clever and "dirty" little tricks that enable you to escape desperate situations!
- Crucial ways to keep your pets alive in a melt down.
- Cheap and easy "tools" to stock for self-defense when hunger hits the public.
- And much, much more.

The best part is... you don't have to be a backwoodsman to get going and get prepared.

And most importantly you'll learn...

The Top 77 Items That Instantly Vanish From Store Shelves In A Panic!

As you can imagine, survival after the crisis hits is going to be deadly business. The writer of this report has been involved in more than his fair share of high-intensity, life-or-death "survival situations" where you never carried food but always had to eat.

In a way, crisis survival is a little like hand to hand combat. That's why "Gone Before You Get There" is so perfectly suited for keeping you alive in a modern melt down. This is NOT a game. It's definitely not for wimps. It's a "take no prisoners" survival system that assures you and your family will survive in relative comfort when it gets tough.

Listen: When it comes to our families, we want a system that will keep them safe, and well fed.

And That's How It Should Be!

"Gone Before You Get There" - I believe - is superior to all the other survival reports and systems we've ever seen and read. (I know I'm going to piss a lot of people off by saying that, but it's what I believe in my heart.)

I've looked at it from all angles, and this is the survival system I would trust with my life.

Seriously... with all the weird stuff that's been going on around here lately (I'm not comfortable telling you everything right now)... it's obvious that someone doesn't want you to have this report.

And when you read "Gone Before You Get There", you'll know why.

Which Items Disappear From The Shelves First in A Panic?

Listen, I don't want to draw a lot of attention to myself when I make this report available to our customers. I've got to be very careful how I go about this. I don't want to take the chance of creating too many red flags and getting my name on an "enemies" list again.

Fortunately, since I'm now offering this report as a digital download I can now fill the orders more rapidly. This letter is going out to several people like you who are "chomping at the bit" for more ways to become prepared while the general public is fast asleep. I would encourage you to take action while it's fresh in your mind. Who knows what will trigger the next crisis.

I would hate to have you miss out on this report - especially when I know how important this information can be to your personal safety and well-being. But I also have to look out for my safety and well-being... and right now I think I might be on someone's "target" list.

If I can get this information to you now, instead of later, I'd feel a whole lot better. Not that I'm asking you for a "favor." I wouldn't do that. I want you to buy this report for your self-preservation, not mine. But my strategy is to get this into the public before anything strange happens.

That's one of the reasons I'm going to give you an attractive price discount on this report. The other reason is that it's a "rough cut" with a few imperfections in it (because that's all we have to go with). You probably won't even notice them though unless you're a high school English teacher. The website is:

Save $20 If You Order Now!

Now I must confess something: This report isn't "perfect" in its present state, and I don't feel right selling it to you at full price. Normally, I would sell it for $40.00. But right now, I'm going to let it "fly" out of here for the very low (and affordable) price of only $20 when downloaded digitally.

You can't beat that price - and you can't beat the awesome survival insurance you'll get from this life-saving report "Gone Before You Get There." It's subtitled "77 Items You Must Have... That Instantly Vanish From Store Shelves In A Panic."

The absolute fastest way to order is to go to the website and download the report. The website is www.preparedforcrisis.com. However, you may also order the hard-copy version by calling 877-327-0365. The report is $20.00. You must include shipping and handling of $5.00 or a total of $25.00.
